THE TEAM

BOSTON CELTICS ®

HARRY T. MANGURIAN, JR.

Chairman of the Board and Chief Executive Officer

Entering his fourth year as the sole owner of the Boston Celtics and his sixth in the National Basketball Association, Harry T. Mangurian, Jr. has brought to the Celtics the stability and leadership so essential to the formation of a professional sports franchise. Upon his acquisition of the team following the discouraging 29-53 season of 1978-79, reaction among his colleagues and business associates was described as one of general expectation that this man would help lead the Celtics back to the top, but none could have anticipated the swiftness with which the team has accomplished that goal under his watchful eye. The team's reversal in form has resulted in the accumulation of the League's best record over the past three years, but those persons who are acquainted with Mr. Mangurian's achievements in his other endeavors are not surprised by this accomplishment.

After serving three years in the U. S. Navy, he began expanding a family owned furniture business in Rochester, New York. In the ensuing years, he opened several home furnishing satellite stores in Florida, Georgia, Texas and Colorado. In 1969 the company went public and in 1971 was merged with General Portland, Inc. At that time, he began devoting his full attention to several ancillary business activities.

Involvement remains the key word in any of his interests, whether it is the day-to-day demands of his real estate construction and leasing business, his jet charter operation or his widespread thoroughbred racing and breeding activities. His real estate company, Drexel Properties, Inc., has developed and marketed more than 12,500 condominium and single family units in the Fort Lauderdale and Palm Beach areas of South Florida. Related business activities in which he has held ownership interests include banking and mortgage financing.

Mr. Mangurian has developed an excellent stable of thoroughbred horses, which has included several stake winners; notable among these was Desert Vixen, a two-time Eclipse Award Winner. His major breeding operation is based at his Mockingbird Farm in Ocala, Florida, and also includes a similar operation that he maintains in New York State, near his native Rochester.

He has been appointed by Florida Governor Robert Graham as a Founding Officer of the Sunshine Games, a program in which young people compete in preparation for the 1984 Olympics. In addition, he sits on various Boards of thoroughbred racing, breeding and sales associations.

Both the N.B.A. and the Celtics have become the benefactors of Mr. Mangurian's ownership and business acumen; both organizations have felt his influence as a leader striving for excellence. He has been instrumental in accomplishing significant administrative and operational improvements in the organization and his talents have blended well with those of Red Auerbach and Coach Fitch. He represents the Celtics as the team's N.B.A. Governor and has been appointed by N.B.A. Commissioner Lawrence O'Brien to the Executive, Advisory/Finance and Labor Relations Committees. In addition, he serves as Chairman of the Ownership Transfer/Expansion Committee.

A man in constant motion, the traveling demands of his varied interests are eased by the accompaniment of his wife Dottie, a sports enthusiast in her own right. They divide their time between Boston, Fort Lauderdale and Ocala, Florida, where they are able to spend time with their children and grandchildren. Both are looking forward to a reduced travel schedule now that their condominium in Boston has been completed; that new home should provide them both with an expanded opportunity to participate in the Boston Celtics' chase of their 15th N.B.A. World Chmpionship.

RED AUERBACH

President and General Manager

In the National Basketball Association, Red Auerbach and the Boston Celtics are synonymous with winning. Fourteen NBA Championship flags hanging from the rafters of the Boston Garden attest to that. As Red approaches his 32nd season with the Celtics, he has once again brought his team to a place among the elite: for the third time in his illustrious career, he has brought the Celtics from the cellar to the penthouse.

Auerbach began his coaching career on the high school level, but by the age of 29 he was coaching the pros in the NBA. He coached initially at Washington, with the Capitols, from 1946 until 1949; his 49-11 record there in 1946-47 was the best won-lost percentage in the league's history until the 1971-72 Los Angeles Lakers (coached, ironically, by a former Auerbach player, Bill Sharman) recorded a 69-13 mark.

Red coached for three seasons in Washington and one more with the Tri-City Hawks (forerunners of Milwaukee-St. Louis-Atlanta franchises) before moving on to Boston. Mutual friends brought Auerbach and Walter Brown together, and a legendary association was born. Brown gave his new coach free rein to make decisions regarding player personnel, and, in turn, Red gave Brown what he so badly wanted — a winner.

The Celtics achieved immediate respectability with red at the helm, as the 22-46 record the previous season improved to 39-30. However, although the team won consistently throughout Red's first six seasons, it was plagued by the lack of a quality center and was unable to advance beyond the division finals. Bob Cousy, Bill Sharman, Ed Macauley and Frank Ramsey were among those brought to Boston by Red in those early years.

After the team fell to 36-36 in 1955-56 (Red's worst record in Boston), he made the trade which changed the fortunes of the franchise, the league, and the sport itself. He sent Ed Macauley and Cliff Hagan to the St. Louis Hawks for that team's first round draft choice in the 1956 draft and used that choice to pick a center from the University of San Francisco, Bill Russell. The rest, as they say, is history.

Boston went on to win 11 championships in the next 13 seasons, a victory stretch beyond that of any other franchise in any professional sport. And when Red retired from coaching in 1966, he had led his team to division and world championships in 9 of his last 10 seasons. His judgment of talent and his ability to match players with roles have never been matched. He obtained players like: K.C. Jones, Sam Jones, Tom Heinsohn, Tom Sanders, Jim Loscutoff, John Havlicek and Don Nelson in this period. Not coincidentally, each of these has gone on to become a coach himself. When Red left the coaching position, he had rung up 938 regular season victories and another 99 playoff wins, becoming the only coach in NBA history to have accumulated over 1,000 wins.

Russell himself became the next coach of the Celtics, and Red concentrated on his duties as General Manager. And when Russell retired from both coaching and playing three years and two more championships later, Auerbach's talents were calle d upon as never before. Incredibly, after only one season with a losing record, the team once again became a contender. Dave Cowens and Jo Jo White were drafted, joining Havlicek, Nelson and Don Chaney; Paul Westphal, Paul Silas and later Charlie Scott were other mainstays obtained by Auerbach, and the net result was two more championships, in 1974 and 1976.

The 1981 Championship was the culmination of the third era of Auerbach's reconstruction of the Celtics, perhaps the most difficult. The 1979-80 team completed the most dramatic turnaround in the history of the league, quite an accomplishment after the traumatic happenings of the previous two seasons. And that amazing drive to the 1981 title against all odds completed the return to the top. The new core of the team has been fashioned by both the draft and by trades: Larry Bird, Cedric Maxwell and Kevin McHale were all first round draft choices, while Chris Ford, Nate Archibald, M.L. Carr, Robert Parish and Rick Robey were obtained through trades.

Recently, Red has received various honors from organizations and universities. In 1982, Red was elected to the Washington Hall of Stars, a Hall of Fame which involves people from all sports. Red has also received a Doctor of Humane Letters degree from Franklin-Pierce College, in May, 1981 and from the University of Massachusetts at Boston campus in June, 1982.

Red is the author of three books. His first, Basketball for the Player, the Fans and the Coach, has been translated into six languages and is the largest selling basketball book in print. His second book, Winning the Hard Way, was co-authored with Paul Sann. His most recent, Red Auerbach: an Autobiography, was written in conjunction with Joe Fitzgerald. In the near future, Red's "Red On Roundball" series will be available on selecta-vision disc for distribution throughout the world.

Auerbach was recognized for his accomplishments as Executive of the Year in the NBA in 1980. But he has long been recognized as one of the great organizational leaders in corporate America.

BILL FITCH

Head Coach

In 1980, Boston Celtics' Head Coach Bill C. Fitch may have amazed even the most knowledgable basketball observers when he took a Celtics' team, that had managed to notch only 29 victories the previous season, to the National Basketball Association's best regular-season record. But, even the toughest skeptics were convinced after what he has accomplished in the two years since then.

Bill Fitch restored the pride and dignity to the Celtics organization when the Green captured their 14th NBA Championship in 1981. A team comprised of experienced veterans and eager rookies, Fitch's men also compiled the best record (tied with Philadelphia) in the league, 62-20. He was honored as the NBA's Coach-of-the-Year, the second time in his career that he has won that honor.

The 1981-82 season featured the Celtics capturing 63 victories, the most by a Celtics team since 1972-73, and Bill Fitch became only the second coach in NBA history to lead his team to three-straight 60-win seasons. He did become the first NBA coach to lead his team to 60+ wins a year, by winning one more game in each of the three years: 61, 62, 63. In essence, in the past three seasons Fitch has accumulated an impressive 186-60 slate, a winning percentage of 75.6%. In the friendly surroundings of Boston Garden, which has been soldout for the past 76 home contests, Coach Fitch's teams have compiled a 105-18 mark (a 35-6 record each season) over the past three years, a winning percentage of 85.4%.

Two other special events occurred for Bill Fitch in the 1982 season. He was the head coach of the victorious East team, appearing in his first All-Star Game, in the annual basketball classic in January. And, on March 17th, he notched his 500th career victory (including playoffs) in a 113-109 win over the Atlanta Hawks at the Garden.

Coach Fitch, with twelve years of NBA coaching experience and knowledge, is just 10 victories shy of becoming just the 7th man in NBA history to garner 500 wins in a career. He has indeed risen to the top of the ranks of great basketball minds, joining his boss, Red Auerbach, among the elite.

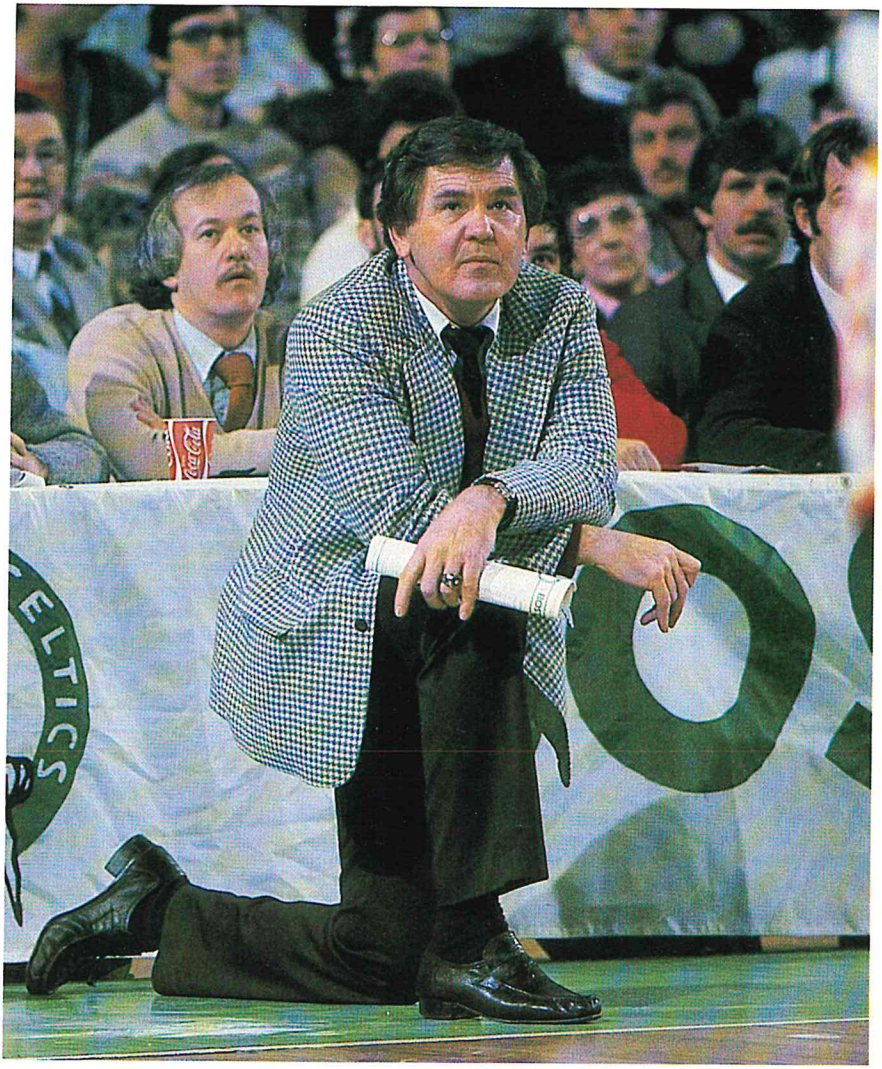
Coach Fitch has utilized carefully planned practices, films and meticulous organization to bring the Celtics success. He ran what Red Auerbach has called, "the toughest" training camp ever in Boston; no small compliment considering the demanding pre-season sessions Red himself conducted when he was the coach. And, Fitch has exhibited the same great capacity for leadership that has helped make his enire coaching career such a success.

A Coe College (Cedar Rapids, Iowa) graduate in 1954, Fitch also began his coaching career there, working with both the baseball and basketball teams. In 1958, he took his Masters in Educational Psychology at Creighton University, serving at the same time as a coach for both sports. Bob Gibson, the former pitching great for the St. Louis Cardinals, was a star for Fitch in both sports at Creighton. The next stop in Bill's career was North Dakota University, where he accumulated a three-year record of 68-15, leading the team to the NCAA Division II finals in his final year.

Bowling Green, in the Mid-America Conference, was a one-year stop for Fitch. His club had an 18-7 mark, but the year was even more significant because it brought him to the attention of Nick Mileti, an alumnus who was later to become the owner of the Cleveland Cavaliers and Bill's employer. But, prior to joining the Cavaliers, Fitch spent two years as head coach at the University of Minnesota, where his Gopher teams won 25 games and lost 23.

In 9 years, Coach Fitch took an expansion team, and enduring the lean and tough years at the start, to the Central Division title in 1975-76. With solid professionals like: Jim Chones, Austin Carr, Jim Cleamons, Bingo Smith and Campy Russell, the Cavs had an exciting playoff series with the Celtics and K.C. Jones' Washington Bullets in 1976 that brought out thundering throngs of over 20,000 fans to the Cavs' new Richfield Coliseum. However, in 1979, and his first losing season since 1974-75, Bill Fitch bid farewell to the young Cleveland franchise and resigned as head coach in an emotional press conference. But, in Boston the emotion was at the other end of the spectrum, for an overjoyed Red Auerbach quickly moved to hire Bill.

"In my wildest dreams I never thought I could get Bill for the team," Auerbach revealed after Fitch signed a multi-year contract. "He's the perfect guy to help us back to the top, a man's man who relates to his players well."



Fitch made a number of key decisions in leading the Celtics to the title and to become such a dominant force in the league. Success has not come by chance for Bill Fitch. Hard work, a sound understanding of discipline and a careful eye for detail has made Head Coach Bill C. Fitch what he is today — one of the finest and winningest coaches in NBA history.

K. C. JONES

Assistant Coach

K.C. Jones is a true veteran of the National Basketball Association with over 20 years of experience as a player, assistant coach and a head coach. A sincere, reasonable and forceful man, K.C. is among the most respected teachers of the game in the league.

The University of San Francisco was where K.C. began his brilliant playing career. Jones combined with teammate Bill Russell to lead the Dons to consecutive NCAA titles, in 1955 and 1956. The two men were also named to the All-America team and played on the USA Olympic squad in 1956, which captured the Gold Medal.

In the 1956 Collegiate Draft, the Celtics selected K.C. on the third round. USF teammate Russell also joined the Celtics, being their top choice, but K.C. wasn't reunited with his college partner until two years later because of a military commitment.

The 1958-59 season featured the Celtics with an All-Star backcourt in Bob Cousy, Bill Sharman and Sam Jones. Yet, K.C. earned his playing time by displaying great defensive play and playmaking ability. And when Cousy, one of the great playmakers in the history of the game, retired in 1963, Jones calmly assumed that role, placing third in the league in assists and leading the team to yet another NBA championship. Perhaps the best assessment of his value to the Boston Celtics was in the bottom line - in the 9 years K.C. Jones played for the Celtics, 8 NBA Championships were brought home to Boston.

A personable and hard-working man, K.C. began his coaching career at Brandeis University, but then joined his former teammate Bill Sharman, with the Los Angeles Lakers, as an assistant coach. Jones and Sharman combined to coach the Lakers to the 1972 NBA title.

K.C.'s head coaching duties began in 1973 with the San Diego Conquistadors of the American Basketball Association. One year later, the Washington Bullets tabbed K.C.'s talents to be their head coach. He spent three successful seasons with the Bullets, compiling in that period a 155-91 record, best in the league. In 1977, the Bullets relieved him of his duties, but another team saw the value and expertise of this man. That team was the Boston Celtics. Ten years after his retirement as a player with the Green, Jones returned as an assistant coach and was reunited with former teammate Tom "Satch" Sanders. K.C. did have a brief coaching stint with Milwaukee before Boston in 1976.

For the past four seasons, fans have watched K.C. coach from the bench as an assistant coach. He was joined by Head Coach Bill Fitch in 1979 and one year later by Jim Rodgers, and is an integral part of the Celtics' braintrust which led the Green to NBA Title #14 in 1981. In the basketball world, K.C. Jones is universally admired for his class and respected for his knowledge of the game.

When K.C. isn't busy with his coaching responsibilities during the season with the Celtics, he is just as busy planning and coordinating summer basketball camps that attract boys and girls from the entire Eastern Seaboard states.

JIMMY RODGERS

Assistant Coach

The 1982-83 NBA season brings Assistant Coach Jim Rodgers and the Boston Celtics together for the third consecutive year. Since joining Head Coach Bill Fitch and fellow Assistant Coach K.C. Jones in the summer of 1980, Rodgers has made major contributions including helping lead the team to the NBA Championship in 1981.

A quiet, personable, hard-working man who is very perceptive about the game of basketball, Jim's important responsibilities include: scouting, game preparation and coaching from the bench. Rodgers is a man of vast organizational ability and he employs the same methodical approach to coaching that Bill Fitch has utilized with great success. And when it comes to analyzing the top collegiate players after the conclusion of the regular season, its Jim who is primarily responsible for scouting and determining which players could fulfill the Celtics need for the future.

A graduate of the University of Iowa in 1956, where he was a three-year starter for the Hawkeyes, Rodgers began his coaching career as the assistant to Bill Fitch at the University of North Dakota. When Fitch left North Dakota in 1967, Jim assumed the head coaching duties and accumulated an impressive 39-33 record over the next three years. In 1970, Jim spent one season as assistant coach to Lannie Van Eeman at the University of Arkansas. The following year he was reunited with Bill Fitch, as his assistant coach and chief scout, with the newly-formed Cleveland Cavalier franchise of the NBA.

From 1971 to 1978, Rodgers was head scout, bench coach and college scout for the Cavaliers. For the 1979-80 season, he served as the Director of Player Personnel for Cleveland. However, when the franchise changed hands several times late in the season, Jim opted to rejoin his long-time friend Bill Fitch, who had left Cleveland in 1979, here in Boston to help lead the Celtics back to the top of the NBA.

Reunited again for the third time, Rodgers and Fitch along with K.C. Jones, have brought success to another basketball program here in Boston. The respectability and pride can be witnessed in the Celtics with the won-loss records over the past three campaigns, 61-21, 62-20 and 63-19. Jim Rodgers has been a major factor in helping the Boston Celtics achieve that level of success.

DR. THOMAS SILVA

Team Physician

For the past 14 seasons, Dr. Thomas Silva has been Celtics Team Physician and with that title comes the responsibility of making a firm decision of whether a player will or will not suit up for a game, no matter how important the contest is. Beside making this decision, Dr. Silva diagnoses and treats every injury that the players receive. In a nutshell, Dr. Silva oversees and helps ensure the players are in top physical health game in and game out.

Dr. Silva can usually be found sitting adjacent to the Celtics bench at all home games and he does travel with the team on all playoff contests. His expertise and knowledge of athletic injuries became very useful when Nate Archibald crashed to the Philadelphia Spectrum floor in Game #2 of the 1982 Eastern Conference Finals with the Sixers, resulting in a painful dislocation of the shoulder.

A graduate of Tufts University, he received a D.M.D. from Tufts Dental School and his M.D. from Boston University Medical School. He serves as Chief Physician for Boston University athletics and is a general surgeon at University Hospital in Boston.

A resident of Chestnut Hill, Mass., Dr. Silva is married and has six children, four boys and two girls.

RAY MELCHIORRE

Trainer

When people think of the Boston Celtics, the first thing that usually comes to mind are the athletes who have made the team the potent force it is in the NBA. But, there is one man who is responsible for keeping the well-trained athletes healthy for 82 games a year, and that man for the Boston Celtics is Ray Melchiorre.

Ray is one of the veteran trainers in the National Basketball Association and is the fifth trainer in the 36-year history of the Boston Celtics franchise. A native of Philadelphia and a 1970 graduate of Bethel College in McKenzie, Tennessee, where he was head trainer and baseball coach for four years, Melchiorre is a member of the National Trainers Association and has taught athletic injury courses at the University of Buffalo, Canisius College and Buffalo State College.

Experience is a plus for any position in business or sports and Ray has accumulated a wealth of experience in the world of basketball; being the head trainer of the Pittsburgh Condors of the ABA (2 years) and the Buffalo Braves (6 years) before joining the Celtics in 1979. In his years with the Braves, he instituted a flexibility program that resulted in a dramatic reduction of muscle pulls and related injuries; in his three years with the Celtics, that program has resulted in a perfect record — not a single player has missed a game yet with an injury of that nature.

In the business world, The Ray Melchiorre Sports Injury Center in Buffalo is one of the finest establishments of its kind in the country. It is a fully-equipped facility for rehabilitation of any sport-related injuries.

Ray and his wife, Liz, reside in Walpole, Mass. They have three children: Michael (19), Kathy (14) and Lisa (9), and all of them have helped the Celtics as either ball persons or as helpers for their father during the game.

JOHNNY MOST

Radio Voice of the Celtics

For almost a third of a century, Boston Celtics' fans have sat by their radios and thrilled to some of the best basketball action in history, as related by the gravelly voice of the great Johnny Most. Calling the plays as he sees them and bringing 31 years of NBA experience to the microphone, Most has become a tradition with the team and its fans.

In his 30 years with the Celtics, Johnny has been a part of 14 NBA World Championships and some of the greatest moments in professional sports. His "Havlicek Stole the Ball" will be remembered as one of the immortal moments in sports broadcasting.

The transplanted New Yorker is a graduate of Brooklyn College, where he played both football and basketball. He began his broadcasting career as a protege to one of the all-time greats, Marty Glickman, announcing the New York Knicks' games; he also did the New York Yankees' pre- and post-game shows with Glickman and Gussie Moran. Experience with the football Giants and the Brooklyn Giants and Dodgers further qualified him for his move to Boston in 1952 to join the Celtics.

Johnny's enthusiasm for the Celtics and the game of basketball is contagious. Celtics' fans strongly identify him with the team; thus, when the Celtics made the switch to WRKO Radio (680 AM) last year, it was inevitable that Most would make the move also, carrying his life's work to the new station.

Most, who now resides in Manchester, New Hampshire, has four children, two boys and two girls.

GLENN ORDWAY

Color Commentary, Radio

Glenn Ordway joins Johnny Most this year as the color commentator on the broadcast of Celtics' games on WRKO-Radio. Ordway, who filled in for Most for 15 games last season doing play-by-play when Johnny was sidelined with the flu, brings a wealth of radio experience to the job.

Glenn spent five years as the sports director and talk show host at Boston radio station WMEX/WITS, serving two of those as the color analyst for that station's broadcasts of Boston Bruins' games. In the spring of 1981, he brought his considerable talents to WRKO.

Ordway has anchored WRKO's continuous coverage of the Boston Marathon for the past two years. In 1981, he was distinguished with a first place sports award for that coverage from United Press International. WRKO listeners were also provided with the most up-to-date NFL and NBA draft coverage in Boston in 1981 and 1982. When the Boston Celtics clinched their 14th World Championship, he reported the celebration live from the Houston Summit.

Glenn and his wife, Christine, who recently gave birth to their first child, bought a house in Hanover, Mass. over the summer.

GIL SANTOS

Play-by-Play, Television

Gil Santos brings over 20 years of broadcasting experience to the Celtics' games on WBZ-TV (Ch. 4) this year. He will team up with Bob Cousy in the broadcast of almost 40 games in the 1981-82 season.

Gil has an impressive list of credentials in both radio and television. After his 1959 graduation from the New England Broadcast School, he worked in the New Bedford area in radio. In 1966, he joined WBZ-Radio as a free-lance announcer doing New England Patriots and Boston College football; he remained the Voice of the Patriots until 1979 and is still doing B.C. football. Although his most extensive experience has been in football, he has also broadcast New England Teamen Soccer and both Providence College and Boston Celtics' basketball. In the latter stages of the 1980 season, Johnny Most was sidelined by a cold and Santos took over the mike for a number of games.

In 1971, Gil joined the full-time staff of WBZ-Radio as the morning sportscaster, a position he still holds. He has also done national football broadcasts for CBS-TV.

He has been the recipient of a number of awards, including a New England Emmy in 1980 as the Best Play-by-Play broadcaster in the area and the Massachusetts Sportscaster of the Year award in the same year.

BOB COUSY

Color Commentary, Television

The transition from player to coach to television broadcaster has never been handled more smoothly than by Bob Cousy. But, of course, "smooth" has always been his style.

For thirteen years, he was a dominant force in the NBA as a playmaker and scorer, while leading the now-famous Celtic fast break. During this period, Bob captained teams that produced seven league championships. He was named the Most Valuable Player in the league in 1957, and was chosen to the All-NBA first team for 10 straight years.

Once out of uniform, Cousy lent his knowledge of the game to others as a college and professional coach. His successful reign as head coach of Boston College was followed by a 4½-year stint with the Cincinnati Royals (who became the Kansas City Kings in his third year). While a professional coach, he played an essential part in the development of a young player named Nate Archibald, who went on to become one of the great guards in the history of the game himself, and lead the Celtics to a championship of his own last year.

Cousy's tenacity on the court as both player and coach has accompanied him to the broadcasting field. His technical insight into the game of basketball gives viewers an understanding of the action that few commentators are as qualified to share.

The former Holy Cross All-American makes his home in the city of his alma mater, Worcester, Mass., where he lives with his wife Missy.

MIKE GORMAN

Play-by-Play, Cable Television

Mike Gorman is returning for his second year as the play-by-play announcer for the cable network broadcasting 30 Celtics' games this year, PRISM/New England. Last year, the initial season for PRISM, Mike drew excellent reviews for his incisive play-by-play and his knowledge of basketball.

Mike, 33, is a native of Boston who grew up practically in the shadow of the Boston Garden. He learned the game watching the great Celtics' teams of the 50's and 60's.

His experience in broadcasting is extensive. Currently the Sports Director at WPRI-TV in Providence, Rhode Island, he has also served as the voice of the University of Rhode Island on WPRO. He also handles the play-by-play on television for the Providence College Friars. In 1980, Mike received the Associated Press Award for his play-by-play work with Tom Heinsohn, his cohort on the Celtics' broadcasts, on Providence College baketball.

TOM HEINSOHN

Color Commentary, Cable Television

Tom Heinsohn is a name that certainly needs no introduction to followers of Boston Celtics' basketball. One of basketball's all-time greats, he played for the Celtics from 1956 to 1965 and was a key member of eight championship teams. He was the NBA Rookie of the Year in 1956-57, was a member of the All-NBA Team 4 times, and averaged 18.6 points during his illustrious playing career.

Tom returned to the Celtics four years after his retirement as a player to take the coaching reins vacated by Bill Russell. His coaching career, like his playing career, was punctuated with success, and he was twice the coach of Celtics' championship teams and the recipient of the NBA's Coach of the Year award in 1972-73.

Heinsohn has broad experience behind the mike on both radio and television and has covered both collegiate and professional basketball. When he is not covering basketball for PRISM/New England, he is a chartered life underwriter with State Mutual Life Assurance Company of Worcester and has an ownership interest in the Hamiltonian Hotel in Bermuda.

Tom Heinsohn teams with Mike Gorman to provide color commentary on all PRISM/New England basketball telecasts, including the Boston Celtics, Big East Conference and Holy Cross basketball.

1982-83 NBA RULE CHANGES

Clarification of substitution rule

A player must report to an area within four feet of either side of the scorer with warm-ups removed before referee beckons player into game. League will provide scorer with official black-and-white striped cap to aid player in reporting.

Two minor rule changes have been adopted for the 1982-83 NBA season, both involving throw-ins after a ball goes out of bounds. This season, the team putting the ball in play will have the option of designating which player makes the throw-in, rather than have an official assign that task to a nearby opponent of the player who committed the violation. Also, on a throw-in where the ball goes out of bounds without being touched by a player on the court, the other team will take possession at the original throw-in spot.

Following is the precise wording of the two new rules:

Rule No. 8, Section II, d

"After the ball is out of bounds the team shall designate a player to make the throw-in. He shall make the throw-in at the spot out of bounds nearest where the ball crossed the boundary. The designated thrower-in or his substitute shall not be changed except following a regular or 20-second timeout."

Rule No. 8, Section III, b, Exception

"On a throw-in which is not touched in bounds, the ball is returned to the original throw-in spot."

NBA Playoff Format

Under the National Basketball Association playoff formula, 12 teams will be eligible for post season play.

Each Division winner in the Atlantic, Central, Midwest and Pacific will automatically go into the playoffs no matter what the team's record is.

Then the next best four teams in each conference (based on won/lost record) will go into the playoffs.

There will then be six teams in each conference in the playoffs. These teams will be ranked according to won/lost records with the team with the best record as number one and the team with the sixth best record as number six.

Teams ranked one and two will receive a bye in the first playoff round. The teams ranked four and five will play each other in a best two-out-of-three series and teams ranked three and six meet each other in a best two-out-of-three series.

The winner of the series between teams four and five then meets team one in a best four-of-seven series. The winner of the three and six series then meets team two in a best four-of-seven confrontation.

The winners then play for a conference title and then on to the championship. Each of these series is best four-out-of-seven.

REVIEW OF 1982 PLAYOFFS

FIRST ROUND

GAME #1: at Boston 109, Washington 91 — April 25, 1982

Spencer Haywood scored 15 first-half points to give the Bullets a 52-50 lead at the intermission. However, the Celtics took the lead after three quarters (74-67) and opened up an insurmountable 107-86 advantage thanks to 10 fourth-quarter points by Kevin McHale. Rick Robey played a key role for the Celts in the second half, scoring 10 points and grabbing 5 rebounds. M.L. Carr was the game's high scorer with 21 points, while McHale netted 16. Haywood paced the Bullets with 17 points.

GAME #2: Washington 103, at Boston 102 — April 28, 1982

Bullets' rookie guard Frank Johnson connected on a three-point field goal from 29 feet out with just three seconds remaining in the game to even the series at one game apiece. The Celtics led by seven points (51-44) at halftime as Larry Bird (7 of 9, 14 points) regained his shooting touch. The turning point for the Bullets came in the third quarter when they grabbed a three-point lead (77-74) despite shooting just 40 percent (13-32) from the floor; 20 of their 22 points in the quarter came on offensive rebounds. Johnson scored 24 of his 26 points in the second half to share game-high honors with teammate Haywood. Bird had 26 points in the losing cause.

GAME #3: Boston 92, at Washington 83 — May 1, 1982

The Celtics, with revenge on their minds after dropping Game #2 at home, responded with a strong 92-83 road win in Landover, Maryland, their 10th straight win on the Bullets' home court. The Celts were in control from the outset, leading (28-18) at the quarter and (48-38) at the half. The Bullets did pull to within six points (84-78) with 2:31 remaining in the game but Robert Parish and Tiny Archibald countered with clutch baskets to ice the win. Parish was outstanding, scoring 25 points, grabbing 13 rebounds and blocking 6 shots. Bullets' center Rick Mahorn was ejected from the game with 1:28 remaining after tossing the ball at Gerald Henderson; small skirmishes between players on the two teams halted play briefly at that point.

GAME #4: Boston 103, Washington 99 (OT) May 2, 1982

The Celtics came back from a 10-point second half deficit (60-50) to defeat the Bullets in a grueling overtime struggle. The win game the Celts a commanding three games to one lead in the best-of-seven series. Spencer Haywood's runner with three seconds remaining in the game could have given the Bullets their second win of the series. In the five-minute overtime, Kevin McHale simply took charge, scoring six of his 25 points (a career playoff high) to pace the Celtics to a 12-8 advantage in the extra period.

GAME #5: at Boston 131, Washington 126 (OT) May 5, 1982

In a grueling double-overtime thriller, the Celtics emerged as the survivors in the series by outscoring the Bullets 12-7 in the second extra period. The game was tied at 52 at the end of the first half, but the Celtics went on a 22-6 tear midway through the third period to assume an apparently secure 18-point lead (82-64). The home team held a 13-point lead (86-73) at the end of the third period, and the lead was still 13 (103-90) with just 4:17 left in the game. But Frank Johnson hit three 3-point field goals in a row and Jeff Ruland hit 2 clutch free throws with 24 seconds left to send the game into overtime. In the first overtime period, the Bullets pulled to a 5-point lead (117-112) with just 1:01 remaining, but key plays by Cedric Maxwell and Kevin McHale, including the latter's tap-in of an Archibald miss with 1 second left, brought the Celtics back. The Celtics fell behind by 4 points early in the second overtime before outscoring the Bullets 10-1 to end the game.

EASTERN CONFERENCE FINAL

GAME #1: at Boston 121, Philadelphia 81 — May 9, 1982

After taking a 30-24 lead after one period, the Celtics turned the game into a rout, sparked by Rick Robey's 15 points in the second period; the home team carried a 62-45 lead into halftime. The Celtics proceeded to outscore the 76ers by a 31-11 margin in the third period in pulling out to a commanding 93-56 lead entering the final quarter. Boston increased the margin to as many as 48 points (110-62) in coasting to victory. Robey scored his career playoff high of 19 points, while Larry Bird and Robert Parish led the Celtics' attack with 24 points apiece. Andrew Toney netted 15 points in the losing cause.

GAME #2: Philadelphia 121, at Boston 113 — May 12, 1982

Caldwell Jones scored 10 of his 22 points in the fourth period as the 76ers evened the best-of-seven Eastern Conference Finals at one game each. The Celtics trailed 62-56 at the half, but regained the lead after three periods (90-88) as Robert Parish netted 11 of his 19 points. The 76ers took the lead for good at 101-100 on a Clint Richardson jump shot with 7:06 left in the game. The 76ers gradually built their lead to 9 points (117-108) with 1:47 remaining to put the game out of reach. Andrew Toney had a game-high 30 points on 13-22 shooting. Tiny Archibald led the Celtics with 24 points, adding 13 assists.

GAME #3: at Philadelphia 99, Boston 97 — May 15, 1982

In the first minute of play, Celtics' playmaker Nate Archibald was lost to the team for the remainder of the series when he dislocated his left shoulder diving to prevent a Maurice Cheeks fast-break basket. After falling behind by as many as 9 points in the opening period (19-28), the teams engaged in a tight second period which saw 7 ties before the sixers emerged from the half with a 49-47 lead. Philadelphia moved to an 80-70 lead in the third period, led by Bobby Jones' 8 points, and the Sixers scored the first 4 points of the fourth quarter to increase that bulge to 14 points. With just 3:26 left in the game, the Sixers still held a 10-point edge (97-87), but the Celtics outscored them 10-2 over the remainder of the game. Cedric Maxwell had 3 chances to tie the game in the last 10 seconds, but missed the first, was blocked by Erving on the second and had the ball stripped from his hands by Maurice Cheeks at the buzzer.

GAME #4: at Philadelphia 119, Boston 94 May 16, 1982

The 76ers took a 3-1 lead in the series for the third straight year by inflicting the worst defeat of the season on the Celtics. A run of 16 straight points gave Philly a 17-point lead (30-13) with 1:18 left in the first period, but the Celtics outscored the Sixers 31-14 over the next 9:29 to knot the score at 44 points apiece with 3:49 left in the first half. But the Sixers scored 11 of the lst 15 points in the period to grab a 7-point (55-48) halftime lead, and were never headed thereafter. The Celtics could get no closer than 5 points (72-67) in the third period, and never got the lead into single digits in the final quarter. Andrew Toney was sensational for the Sixers, scoring 39 points. Robert Parish led the Celtics with 18 points.

GAME #5: at Boston 114, Philadelphia 85 May 19, 1982

The Celtics clamped on the defense to narrow the Sixers' edge in the series to 3-2. Philadelphia uncharacteristically shot just .333 from the field in the game; they trailed 33-22 at the end of the first period, 57-37 at the half and could get no closer than 17 points in the last half of the game. Robert Parish (26 points, 15 in the first period and Larry Bird (20 points, 20 rebounds) led the way for the home team; Andrew Toney had 18 points for the 76ers. Philadelphia was outrebounded 64-49 in the game.

GAME #6: Boston 88, at Philadelphia 75 May 21, 1982

Once again, the Celtics' defense was the key, as Boston evened the series with a win in Philadelphia to come back home for the seventh game. After the Sixers jumped out to a 25-10 lead just 78:19 into the game, the Celtics scored 10 of the last 11 points of the period to reduce the margin to 6 points (26-20) entering the second frame. Philadelphia led by the same margin (48-42) at halftime. The third period saw the Celtics draw to a tie on 3 occasions before finishing the period down by three points (64-61). With 9:46 remaining and the Sixers maintainig a 6-point lead (67-61), Celtics' head coach Bill Fitch brought Robert Parish back into the lineup despite 5 fouls on the Boston center, and the Celtics proceeded to run off a string of 12 straight points, gaining the lead for the first time in the game. The Sixers got to within one point (74-73) with 4:28 left, but the Celtics outscored them 14-2 the rest of the way to seal the win. Philadelphia's 27 points in the second half of the game set a new playoff record for games played since the advent of the 24-second clock in 1954, and their 11 points in the final priod tied a record for fewest points by one team in a playoff 4th quarter.

GAME #7: Philadelphia 120, at Boston 106 May 23, 1982

People were asking themselves, "Can history repeat itself?", referring to the fact that the Celtics had battled back from a 3-1 deficit to knot the series up at 3 games apiece. In 1981, the Celtics had done just that, and eventually went on to defeat the Houston Rockets for their 14th NBA Title. But the Sixers were determined this day, even though they held leads of just two (30-28) and three (52-49) points at the end of the first and second periods respectively. Philadelphia jumped out quickly at the start of the second half, reeling off six straight points on two Maurice Cheeks baskets and a Julius Erving fast break stuff, and they never looked back. The Celtics did cut the margin to two points (64-62 with 6:05 remaining in the third quarter) but hot-shooting Andrew Toney pulled his team out of danger. Toney poured in 18 second half points, mainly on his pattened 20' jump shot, to send the Sixers into the NBA Finals against the Los Angeles Lakers. Toney, 34 points, and Erving, 29 points, led the Sixers in scoring; Robert Parish (23 points and 14 rebounds) led the Green in scoring, Larry Bird and Kevin McHale tossed in 20 apiece.

YEAR-BY-YEAR ATTENDANCE AT BOSTON GARDEN

Last year, for the third straight season, the Celtics set a franchise record for home attendance. Their total attendance of 595,454 was more than 30,000 better than the previous high, set in 1980-81. Each of the 38 home games played in the Boston Garden were sellouts, increasing the two-year sellout string to 76 games as the 1982-83 season begins.
